Dear Dr. Kent:

This is merely to say thank you for meeting last Wednesday with [Redacted] and me. Your recollections of your role in the 1967 war helped us immensely in understanding this "intelligence success," and we quoted you frequently in making our presentation yesterday. As I hardly need tell you, interviews of this type are often most useful not for the grand revelations they elicit, but for the confirming evidence and illustrative details they add. This was the case here.

So please know of our appreciation for your willingness to make your time and recollections available to us. On a more personal level, I found it great fun, after having heard so frequently of Sherman Kent as both historian and intelligence officer, to have the chance to chat with you.

Yours sincerely,

/s/
